

Announces Free ever classroom management system (CMS); Introduces free and intuitive Classroom Management System and Q&A portal for educational purposes

DECEMBER 22, 2014: TORONTO – After over 3 years of development, we the founders of gotoClassroom are proudly to introduce free and easy to use Classroom Management System (CMS) and the first ever Q&A web portal which is strictly designed for educational purposes.

gotoClassroom's CMS provides the basic functional classroom tools such as—live discussion, notes, assignments, quizzes, calender, gradebooks, attendance and library -- for teachers/educators to build and begin managing their online classroom in minutes. For a more customized experience, teachers/educators can find and install additional tools from the gotoClassroom's App store. Each application is seamlessly integrated into the platform's user interface meaning that apps readily draw from user data and circumvents popups, tab switching, and downloads.

gotoClassroom's App Store to be released on January 30, 2015 which consists of the App Store itself and open API with full functionality relates to teaching and learning for developers around the World to contribute their solutions toward the deficits in education. Meanwhile, developers can now start using the gotoClassroom's API by sending their request to app@gotoclassroom.com.

Each registered user has a Dashboard which not only manages their classrooms but also provides an important networking tool. This Dashboard allows teachers, parents, and students to exchange in ideas and potential opportunities on the first ever Q&A portal which is strictly designed for educational purposes.

gotoClassroom is went live on December 22, 2014 and ready to solve the 21st Century education problems with developers around the Globe. For educator, student and a parents can register their gotoClassroom account for completely free today at <http://www.gotoclassroom.com>.
